

Dear Jeanine

I just finished talking to you on the phone and I'm sorry I put you on the spot the way I did. I probably shouldn't have asked the questions I did but the truth is I'm sure I'm not going to want to say good-bye when I leave for Trinidad. I only hope you will understand I'm not trying to force you into an outright decision as to whether you will marry me or not.

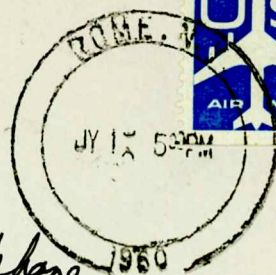

Actually there are two reasons why I asked you if I should try to get housing in Trinidad. The first is I find myself in love with you and I wanted to let you know that I have thought of asking you to marry me. I realize we have not seen very much of each other but hope this can be corrected in time to come.

The second reason I asked the question is that I'm going to have to let the air force know if I have any plans on getting married while I'm in Trinidad. While my first reaction to making such a decision is to let things work themselves out. I've been in the air force long enough to find out that they don't. The Air force is asking for funds to remodel a house in Trinidad for Captain Anderson. The house he is presently living in is being taken back by the ???. I know if nothing is said about the possibility of requiring another house the air force won't even request money for it. For these reasons I plan on telling the air force I may want housing while In Trinidad. I don't think It would be fair to make such a statement with out at least discussing it with you.

Well hon i Think I've said enough for one letter, until I hear from you

Love Larry

Dear Jeanine,

I just finished talking to you on the phone and I'm sorry I put you on the spot the way I did. I probably shouldn't have asked the questions I did but the truth is I'm sure I'm not going to want to say good-bye when I leave for Trinidad. I only hope you will understand I'm not trying to force you into an outright decision as to whether you will marry me or not.

Actually there are two reasons ^{why} I asked you if I should try and get housing in Trinidad. The first is I find myself in love with you and I wanted to let you know that I have thought of asking you to marry me. I realize we have not seen very much of each other but hope this can be corrected in time to come.

The second reason I asked the question is that I'm going to have to let the air force know if I have any plans on getting married while ~~am~~ I'm in Trinidad. While my first reaction to making such a decision is to let things work themselves out

I've been in the Air Force just long enough to find out that they don't. The Air Force is asking for funds to remodel a house in Trinidad for Capt Anderson.
The house he is presently living in is being taken back by the Navy. I know if nothing is said about the possibility of requiring another house the Air Force won't even request money for it.
For these reasons I plan on telling the Air Force I may want housing while in Trinidad. I don't think it would be fair to make such a statement without at least discussing it with you.

Well now I think I've said enough for one letter. Until I hear from you

Love,
Larry
